Reviews

Comprehensive guide! Its this type of very good read through. It is actually writter in simple words and phrases rather than difficult to understand. It is extremely difficult to leave it before concluding, once you begin to read the book.

Major-General B. R. Johnsons Statement of the Explosion of the Mine at Petersburg, July 3rd, 1864. On the 27th of July, 1864, the enemy was observed to be moving large forces to the north side of the James--to be showing much activity in that direction, leading us to anticipate some active operations there. This was, no doubt, a piece of strategy or a trick to deceive us; and it had, to a certain extent, that effect, for movements were made on our side correspondingly. General Fields division, which had been holding the part of our line of defences on the right of my division, was taken out of the trenches, and Colquitts brigade, of Hokes division, was temporarily transferred to my command, in exchange of Grades brigade, and I was left to hold, with less force, defences double the length, or more, of that which I had previously defended. Indeed, my understanding is that my command was all the troops in our trenches when the mine was exploded; all of the rest of the army having been moved or held ready to meet any demonstration the enemy might make on the north side of the James River. About five minutes before five o'clock on the morning of the 30th of July the enemy sprung a large mine under that portion of my breastworks, about two hundred yards north of the Baxter road, known as Pegrams salient. In this salient there...
